

Qaelum and Alara Imaging Announce a Strategic Technical Partnership

Qaelum, a leading provider of innovative healthcare solutions, and Alara Imaging, a pioneer in the development of Medical Imaging Gateways, are excited to announce a strategic technical partnership aimed at both simplifying the implementation of the novel CMS measures on Excessive Radiation Dose and Inadequate Image Quality and the secure use of patient radiation dose management solutions in the cloud.

Qaelum's global expertise in dose monitoring and quality management, coupled with Alara Imaging's cutting-edge cloud gateway technology, create a powerful synergy aimed at addressing the evolving challenges in cloud-based radiation dose and quality management. The collaboration will leverage Qaelum's DOSE, a state-of-the-art radiation dose monitoring solution, and Alara Imaging's Medical Imaging Gateway, to provide comprehensive and integrated solutions for healthcare providers worldwide.

Mr. Jurgen Jacobs, CEO and co-founder of Qaelum, commented, "We are happy to collaborate with an innovative company like Alara Imaging. This strategic partnership is a testament to our commitment to try to offer the best technology solutions for our clients. By providing the tools to perform root cause analysis on these CMS measures, we are poised to make a meaningful impact on global healthcare."

Mr. Nate Mazonson, CEO and co-founder of Alara Imaging, added, "Alara is proud to collaborate with Qaelum to support health systems across the U.S. with these important patient safety measures as well as provide the technology infrastructure to support Qaelum's evolution to a cloud-native framework."

The partnership will initially focus on a seamless integration of the calculated results of the previously mentioned CMS measures within the patient radiation dose solutions of Qaelum, with plans to globally expand the collaboration into other areas such as the integration of Alara Imaging's Medical Imaging Gateway in the technological stack of Qaelum. Both companies are committed to a long-term relationship that will drive innovation and success for their clients.
